Tony has worked in the field of donor relations in one capacity or another for the past 10 years. He began his professional career as associate director of principal gift recognition at the University of Chicago where he later worked as director of special events and eventually as senior director of donor engagement. He recently made the move from educational donor relations to medical center donor relations with his relocation to Loyola University Health System. At Loyola, Tony manages all the behind the scenes and support efforts of the fund raising team. His teams include, donor relations, donor communications, special events, data management, gift processing, the grateful patient program, partners in care program, prospect research, and alumni relations. He works closely with the Senior Vice President of Development & External Affairs as well as the marketing and media relations teams.

Tony holds his BA from Loyola University Chicago, his M.Div from University of St. Mary of the Lake, and his MA from Northeastern Illinois University. Elected to the ADRP Board in 2009, he served as chair of the ADRP 2007 International Conference in San Antonio and has hosted a regional workshop at both the University of Chicago and LUHS. He has been a member of ADRP since 2004.

Tony currently volunteers with ADRP as a member of the member's relations committee.
