Lynne Wester is the new Director of Stewardship and Donor Recognition at Yeshiva University in New York City. Previously she served as the associate director of donor relations at the Polytechnic Institute of New York University, where she rebuilt and transformed an entire donor relations program from the ground up. Previously, she worked at Rollins College for four years in varying capacities from development to foundation relations and finally found a home in donor relations.

In addition to her responsibilities as a board member of ADRP and serving as the webmaster and technology coordinator of the ADRP, Wester is a frequent presenter at CASE and ADRP conferences. Her specialties include technology, millennial generation donor research, small shops, and practical foundations of donor relations and stewardship. She received her undergraduate degrees from the University of South Carolina and is a loyal gamecock alumni and fan.
