Debbie Meyers has worked in advancement for more than 25 years, much of that time in higher education. In addition to creating and enhancing donor relations and stewardship programs at the University of Florida and Carnegie Mellon University, she has built communications, development and alumni programs for a Catholic high school, an art museum and a health science center development office.

A founding board member of the Association of Donor Relations Professionals and faculty star recipient from the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, she has chaired ADRP's international conference, served on many of its committees and is a frequent, popular presenter at conferences. Debbie has a bachelor's degree in English, with minors in linguistics, the Classics and German, from Loyola University in New Orleans and a master's degree in journalism from UF.

An avid volunteer in her community and church, she serves on the board of Hair Peace Charities and on the development committee for the Animal Rescue League of Pittsburgh. She is the proud owner of three rescue dogs -- a Chihuahua, a pit bull mix and a dachshund/yorkie -- who peacefully co-exist with her husband, two daughters, step-son and mother.
